

A Forgotten Chancellor and Canon.

BY A. S. BICKNELL, F.R.A.S., F.L.S.

AS the records of a private family are seldom of sufficient importance to claim a place in the Proceedings of an Archæological Society, these notes are offered by me with diffidence, and only because I think they may here and there illumine an obscure corner of what I may term the minor Story of Somerset. If I have another object, it is that I hope to show, with singular clearness, how a family, bearing a name derived from a village in Normandy, appropriated for their convenience that of a manor in England, the spelling of both varying thenceforth nearly simultaneously ; and that further I believe, though it is rarely possible to point out definitely the first possessor of a particular surname, because generally he has vanished in the mist of time, in this instance I am able to do so ; and certainly at least I can give an outline sketch of some forgotten Somersetshire worthies long passed away.

In rather an out-of-the-way spot, about five miles N.W. of Ilminster, beneath a sombre, forest-clad, projecting hill, conspicuous from the environs of Taunton, there are a few scattered cottages and a modern chapel. The height, rising 820 feet above the sea, is popularly known as Beacon Hill, and the country it seems to guard is the ancient manor of Býkenhulle. The Exon Domesday calls the place Bichehalda, and the great Exchequer one says : " William holds of the Earl, Bichehalle ; Aluric held it in the time of King Edward." Bichehalda and Bichehalle, however, are only semi-phonetic renderings by Norman scribes of the Anglo-Saxon word their ears were not attuned to catch correctly : at all events these names appear no more. The derivation of Bȳkenhulle is at once apparent : Anglo-Saxon Bȳcn or Bȳkene, a beacon ; Hulle or Hyll, a hill ; and for centuries after the invasion the spelling scarcely altered. Our knowledge of the holders of the manor goes no farther back than Aluric, no charter or other document of earlier date, giving another name, having come to light, although this much is ascertained from Domesday, that formerly the manor paid customs to Curry Rivell.¹ William the Conqueror had granted the manor to his natural half-brother Robert, Earl of Cornwall, and Earl or Count of Mortain,² as an unconsidered trifle in a gift of seven hundred and ninety seven manors ; so it is not surprising that the latter accepted the tenure of William de l'Estre.³ Sometime after-

(1). Another Bykenhulle, in N. Wilts, however, occurs in the Appendix to a Latin Charter of Athelstan, dated A.D. 931, and a spot called Bacon Hill may be the same place, though I doubt if the name is sufficiently ancient.

(2). He married Matilda, youngest daughter of Roger de Montgomery, earl of Arundel, and died in 1091. Mortain is about twenty miles E. of Avranches in Normandy, and is often confounded with Mortagne in the department of Orne. William, the son of the above Robert of Mortain, succeeded to his father's titles and possessions, but having rebelled against Henry I in 1103-4, was banished. Being taken prisoner in 1106, he was conveyed to England, where his eyes were put out, and after a long imprisonment he was only released on condition that he became a monk. His earldom was given to Stephen of Blois, afterwards king of England. Forty nine of the 797 manors were in Dorset and Somerset. "The Norman People," pp. 137, 145, 243 ; Banks' "Baronia Anglia," vol. ii, p. 104 ; Map of Domesday Manors, Somerset Archæological Proceedings, vol. v. p. 35

(3). Estre is near Valognes, Normandy. Richard de l'Estre had land in Normandy from the time of the Conquest. In 1165 a Richard de l'Estre held a barony of four knights' fees in Somerset. In 1272 Robert de l'Estre was Viscount of Dorset. "Liber Niger Scaccari" ; "Testa de Nevill" ; "The Norman People," p. 234 ; Dugdale's "Baronage of England," vol. i, p. 24 ; "Annals of England," p. 104, supervised by Dr. Stubbs ; Somerset Archæological Proceedings, vol. xxxvi, p. 21.

wards the forfeiture of the earls of Mortain occurred, and then the descendants of William de l'Estre, as a legal consequence, held their part of the land directly from the king in capite per Baroniam, till about the year 1260, when Johanne, daughter of another William de l'Estre, married Robert de Pavilly, anglice Paveley, bringing the manor to him as her dower. The Paveleys were a baronial family from Pavilly,⁴ a town twelve miles N.W. of Rouen, where the lord Amalbert had founded a monastery in 664, and some of them having passed over to England, either with the Conqueror or shortly afterwards, they soon became a powerful race, established in at least twelve counties.⁵ Reginald de Paveley joined in the first crusade, and fell, circa 1104, at Acre: we find Ralph de Paveley witnessing a charter of William earl of Surrey in the reign of Henry I; and Henry III, in 1241, sent money to Thomas de Paveley [probably son of Thomas de Paveitti, knight banneret, who served in France during the reign of Philip II,] for his journey to join him in Anjou. Another Reginald was summoned as baron in 1260 to attend the king in council: John de Paveley was rector of Hooke, near Beaminster,⁶ in 1312; Richard de Pavely and Sir John, who died 1361, were priors of the hospital of St. John of Jerusalem; lastly Sir Walter became one of the founder-knights of the Garter. In 1281 John de Paveley, evidently named after his mother Johanne, died seized of Býkenhulle, the adjoining Clopton, and eight other manors in Somerset, his heir being his son, also called John.⁷ Roger de Clopton however, in 1302-3, is described as holding Clopton from John de Býkenhulle,⁸ but as we know that John de Paveley was at the same date tenant in capite of Clopton under the king, it follows manifestly that John de Paveley and John de Býkenhulle are the same person. If further proof is necessary that Paveley and Býkenhulle are synonymous, we have it in the fact that both Walter and John de Paveley appear in the assessment of 1326-7 as Walter and John de Býkenhulle.⁹ Nor is the explanation of this metamorphosis difficult to give when we discover that there were several John de Paveleys living at the same time, and that they only followed an established custom in adopting for a junior branch of the family a distinctive surname from one of their manors, to avoid confusion. In feudal times indeed the practice of assuming different surnames was by no means uncommon : a family "chose any appellation they preferred, and it might be taken from the particular castle where the signature happened to be written, or from the superior fee of which the place once formed a portion, or from any name whatever which was most flattering to fancy or ambition."¹⁰ Baldwin, first earl of Devon, used six surnames in his charters, he called himself :

Baldwin Fitz-Gilbert.

„ Vice Comes.
 „ de Devoniâ.
 „ de Excestre.
 „ de Brionis.
 „ de Mælis.

And his eldest and second sons, not content with a choice from the above six, signed respectively, Baldwin de Riveriis and Baldwin de Vernon. In Domesday the earl of Brionne bears five surnames :

Consequently here we have eight surnames used by three members of one family, and ten by two. Even at the present day the custom is exemplified in the titles borne by peers' eldest sons.¹¹

Before the end of the thirteenth century I know of no mention of Bȳkenhulle except to denote a place, whilst thenceforth it runs also as a surname through many generations, the word gradually being modified in its spelling, and concurrently denoting both the manor or hamlet and the people, till it becomes the Bicknell of to-day. The following table illustrates this :

(11). The following is an instance of a name being changed twice :—Robert de Mandevill had a son, “Galfrid de Mandevill scilicet Galfrid de Cotre,” who begat Robert de Mandevill.—R. Hist. Com. Rep. “Wells Cath. MSS.,” vol. i, p. 222. (24 May. 8 K. John).

(12) Forty-seven spellings of Bicknell are known to me.

Perhaps it may be asked why the village is now called Bickenhall, which does not appear in the above list. The cause is singular and ridiculous. Till 1745 the name had always been some legitimate variation of Bykenhulle, when at that date the curate in charge, remembering that Bichehalle was in Domesday, and desiring doubtless to earn distinction as an etymologist, suddenly and boldly headed a new register with his invention "Bickenhall," and this hybrid monster has crept into our maps, our books, and upon our signposts, although the pronounciation of the peasantry continues to be "Bicknell" all the same. Strange to narrate, a transformation much resembling this occurred also at Bykenhulle in Warwickshire. The manor likewise misspelt in Domesday, "Bichehella," after Turchil de Warwick possessed it in the Conqueror's time, was in part subsequently assigned to the House of Arden, one of whom assumed the surname of Bickenhull, and whose descendant was the Incumbent in 1416, the family shortly afterwards becoming extinct. We find, however, that the place passed through varieties of name just as the other Bykenhulle in Somerset, till it ultimately became "Bicknell," and quite recently and correctly, "Bickenhill."

From Elizabeth's reign or earlier, Bicknell.

I may here mention that all forms of Bignell, Bignold, and Bucknell are in no way connected with Bicknell: they are not Somerset names. The first originally came from Bygenhulle or Bygnelle, in Oxfordshire, and with the second established itself in the eastern counties; while the last, I think, may be traced from Herefordshire. Only in comparatively modern times has Bignell occasionally been written in Somerset by vulgar mistake for Bicknell.

After the adoption of the surname Bikenhulle by Robert de Paveley, there must of course at first have been very few persons so denominated, and no particulars have come down to us concerning any of them till the year 1425, when William Biconyll (or Byconyll or Bykenel) is recorded as the incumbent of Charlton Mackerell, and later of Mells.¹³ His father's name was John, and his mother's Jane or Joane, and he tells us he had one brother John and a sister Elizabeth, but that is all we know of his near relatives. He must, however, have been a man of talent and well connected, or he could scarcely have obtained the offices he held. Pluralists, I daresay, were commoner then than now, and family interest more potent, still, even these alone would hardly have made him at the same time rector of Cliffe at Hoo,¹⁴ near Rochester; rector of Tring¹⁵ with Wigginton, Herts; canon of Lincoln, with the prebend of St. Margaret's, Leicester;¹⁶ canon of Wells; canon of St. Paul's, with the prebendal stall of Eald St.;¹⁷ commissary official of the court of Canterbury, and chancellor of the diocese.¹⁸ Perhaps even a greater proof of his capacity was his being selected by the famous archbishop Chichele to be one of his trustees and executors.

Very likely he drew up the Constitution of All Souls' College, Oxford, founded by Chichele in 1437, or at all events he assisted Lyndwood, to whom I am aware it is sometimes, without proof, attributed. In the college archives his name occurs several times between 1443 and 1446, and he was well known at the University where he had taken his LL.D. degree.

He is mentioned in the records of the diocese of Rochester, April 15, 1448, in connection with the augmentation of the vicar's portion of the parish of Birling, near Maidstone, as well as in other documents. Scotney Castle, Kent, which Chichele obtained early in the reign of Henry V, and bequeathed to a niece, the widow of Sir Henry Peche, passed through his hands as trustee; and no doubt much more might be ascertained concerning the doctor's life and work by following the executorship of the archbishop's will and by examining the records at Canterbury, London, and possibly those of the Cathedrals he was connected with. Dr. Biconyll signed his will on November 3, 1448, and I believe he died the next day, because the appointment of William Cleve, canon of St. Paul's, as his successor at Cliffe Rectory, is dated November 4. Probate was granted November 19. Had it not been for the copy of this will, fortunately preserved in its original abbreviated Latin, at Lambeth Palace Library, we should indeed have known next to nothing of this "forgotten Chancellor;" and I consider it so excellent a specimen of the kind of testament made by a devout Catholic dignitary of the fifteenth century, as well as so directly connected with Somersetshire, that I need scarcely apologise for presently giving it in extenso, or for making a few preliminary comments on it. Two things will probably strike the reader at once: that the testator was a man of culture and wealth, and a thorough-going churchman, not oblivious of the worldly advancement of his family and the preservation of his own memory. The bequests indeed are curiously numerous; large and small they are over a hundred in number; five cathedrals, three convents, eight churches, and over thirty friends or acquaintances receiving legacies, amongst which thirty-two cloaks, gowns, or vestments, and a great many chalices, cups, bowls, and ornaments of silver or silver-gilt, are specified, as well as manuscripts, five horses, and nearly £700 in money, without counting annuities.

TOMB OF DR. BICONYLL, WELLS CATHEDRAL.

To the lover of ecclesiastical jewellery it is consequently vexing in the extreme to think what a loss this church-plate has been, especially when we remember that our own country is now almost entirely denuded of such antique goldsmith's work, though at that period, and till the Reformation, it probably possessed more splendid specimens than any European state.¹⁹ Occasionally the sum left for a special purpose well exemplifies the different purchasing power of money in 1448; for instance, what kind of chalice worthy of the ceremonial of the high altar of Wimborne Collegiate Minster could one now expect to buy for £5? Whereas, on the other hand, £10 would to-day go a long way towards glazing a window in the N.E. aisle of Christchurch.²⁰ One would also much wish to know what the "beads of gold, enamelled and engraved" for the shrine of St. Thomas were like, and to see the illuminations in the "beautiful bible" sent to St. David's. Time and absence evidently had not caused the doctor to lose his affection for Somerset, because, notwithstanding that his official position must have compelled him to live at a distance, he evinces it by so many of his legacies being to places in his own county, including amongst them Mells and Charlton Mackrell, which he had formerly served as priest. This will, besides narrating in detail the last wishes of a fifteenth century canon, has, by a strange chance which I will now relate, been of actual service to Wells Cathedral to-day. Speaking of his desire to be buried in the Chapel of St. Martin, the testator says: "Et volo quod habita licencia requisita edificetur

(19). Hoping I might discover a trace of some of these bequests, I have taken considerable trouble, but I have only convinced myself that three of the MSS. remain in All Souls College Library, and that perhaps a few more may be at New College. In 1696 Bernard enumerates fifty MSS. as being the total which were at All Souls.

(20). When All Souls College was building, 1438 to 1444, the wages paid were: masons, 8d. a day; carpenters, 6d.; labourers, 4½d.; carvers and image makers, 4s. 8d. a week, with bed, board, and lodging. Allowing for the decrease in the value of money, these prices are about double what they are now. Skelton's "Pietas Oxoniensis."

unum monumentum in pariete honestum et demolliatur hostium.”²¹ When I read this, it naturally struck me that I should most likely find the monument, or part of it, in the spot indicated, and my surprise was great, when, owing to my being unable to visit Wells myself, a friend reported to me, in 1888, that the chapel contained only one important tomb, Chancellor Storthwait’s, dated 1458 ; that the verger told him “ there were no other inscriptions in the church anything like so old ” ; and lastly, that he had not found the name “ Biconyll ” in the official list of canons. This completely prevented my prosecuting my search any further, at the moment : in fact, I let the matter rest till August, 1893, when, having journeyed to Somerset for the Archæological Society’s meeting, I went afterwards in person to examine the chapel. If I had been astonished before, I certainly was more so then, for there was the ancient doorway blocked up, with a canopied altar-tomb of the fifteenth century, “ built in the wall ” and across the passage, exactly as the will directs. Upon the sloping lower edge of the plinth, in very uncommon semi-Lombardic letters, but of suspiciously modern appearance, cut in five small inserted lengths of stone, I read :

IOHNNES : STORTNWHIT :
 CHNCCLLHRIVS : WELLENS :
 MCCCCLIV :

At first I thought that possibly Cancellarius might have been the only word legible some years back, and the restorers, knowing of no other chancellor connected with the cathedral at the period the architecture denoted, had filled in Storthwait’s name and the remainder ; but after a little search I discovered that the strange alphabet was one of the four given without date or place of origin in Pugin’s “ Glossary of Ecclesiastical Ornament," published in 1844, at the time of Mr. Ferrey's restoration of the church; and that it had been employed for at least three other tombs of very different dates: moreover, a hunt in Westminster Abbey revealed the fact that it had undoubtedly been copied from the monument of the famous Queen, Eleanor of Castile, A.D. 1290, consequently the Wells inscription, if taken to indicate by its adoption the age of the tomb, pointed to the one hundred and fifty-eighth year before Storthwait died. Though I have met no one able to tell me exactly how old this epitaph is, I am tolerably confident it did not exist more than half-a-century ago, and that the original one was quite different, most likely in small black letter on a bronze band, under two inches wide, fixed between the mouldings of a Purbeck marble slab,²² now wanting, immediately beneath the effigy, which at sometime has been torn out for the value of the metal, whereby it ultimately came about, from there being nothing to show who was buried there, that Dr. Biconyll passed entirely from recollection. The puzzle of this monument will now, however, no longer exist, because the kindness of the dean and chapter has permitted the following words to be graven in unmistakably Victorian letters, instead of those which recorded a wrong chancellor in the misleading capitals of Edward the First's queen:

WILLELMUS BICONYLL. LLD. CAN. WELLENS.

CANC. CANT. OB. MCCCCXLVIII.

In case I am asked where Storthwait is buried, I cannot reply that I am certain, but I believe he was laid in the chapel of the Holy Cross, used occasionally as the Consistory Court, at the west end of the nave, on the north side. Leland, who visited the cathedral between the years 1538 and 1542, wrote: "In superiori transepto versus meridiem jacent in elegantibus tumulis 2 episcopos et quidam Bikenelle, Canonici Wellen-

(22). As seen in the tomb of Bishop Cornish, A.D. 1513.

sis,²³ *Bikenelli cujusdam nobilis consanguineus, in alta tumba : hic Canonicus dedit terras ecclesiæ S. Andreae*²⁴ : and in another passage he says : “Johannes Storthwaith Cancellar. Wellensis, executor Bubbewith Episcopi Bathon. fecit Capellam & Cantariam in Boreal. parte primi transepti,” which clearly shows that at all events “Bikenelle” and “Storthwaith” were not both buried in St. Martin’s Chapel, but in different places, the former on the south side of the main or upper transept, and the latter in the “north part of the first transept,” that is, in the chapel of the Holy Cross.²⁵ To be sure Leland does not expressly say Storthwait was buried there, but it is a legitimate assumption that he was interred where he “made a chapel and a chantry.” Besides the monument, even the blocked doorway has had a share in promoting blunders, for it can never have led into Bishop Stillington’s Lady Chapel,²⁶ at a little distance outside, as Murray’s Handbook asserts, because it was walled up and obstructed by the tomb about twenty-six years before the chapel was built, and

(23). That Dr. Biconyll was Canon of Wells rests, as far as I know, only on this statement, but as the inscription on the monument was intact in 1540, about which date Leland saw it, the cathedral authorities would surely have drawn his attention to any such extraordinary mistake. Moreover, in his will the Dr. leaves a legacy to his tenants at Dultincot (Dulcote), one of the Wells prebends, and speaks of Dr. Carent, the Dean, as his “confrater.” The words “Bikenelle cujusdam nobilis consanguineus,” refer to Sir John Biconyll, who, being a knight, was of course entitled to bear arms, and who is called “nobilis vir dominus” in one of the cathedral decrees. [See p. 214, note 120.]

(24). See the Will, page 204, lines 14-16.

(25). One mistake leads to another. Owing to its being supposed that Dr. Biconyll’s tomb was Storthwait’s, and as it was known from the Cathedral MSS. that Storthwait had endowed a chantry in the chapel of the Holy Cross, it was taken for granted that St. Martin’s had formerly been called by that name, and a printed placard not long ago recorded it for the information of visitors. Storthwait is the name of a manor in Yorkshire.

(26). Stillington was bishop from 11th January, 1465-6 to 8th February, 1491. His chapel, built in 1474, and pulled down by Sir John Gates in 1552, replaced one erected as early as the thirteenth century. “Somerset Archaeological Proceedings,” Vol. 1. p. 87. has never been re-opened. That the door latterly gave direct admission only to some insignificant room, the mark of the low lean-to roof outside declares.

The following is the text of Dr. Biconyll's will, written in full from the copy in abbreviated Latin, preserved in Archbishop Stafford's register, fo. 167, at Lambeth Palace Library.

Will of Mister William Biconyth, Official of the court of Canterbury.

In the name of the most high and indivisible Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, Amen. The condition of the first created human race being spotted with rust, most surely brought according to the law laid down the penalty of death upon posterity : which neither our Lord Jesus Christ himself for the reconciliation of the human race wished to avoid ; yet by his wonderful power, death being conquered, He rising again left us the hope of a new resurrection after this life.

Very often according to the advice of the wise man⁴¹ pondering this in my mind, I, William Byconyth, a most unworthy priest, wishing that the gifts of fortune bestowed upon me by God, and my small private property, should be converted to pious uses for the saving of my soul, and be exchanged for eternal things, being sound in mind, thanks to the most High ! on the third day of the month of November, in the year of the Lord One Thousand cccxlvij, do frame, make, and order my will in this manner.

First, I bequeath and commend my soul to the ineffable mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, and my body to canonical sepulture in the Chapel of saint Martin in the Cathedral church of Wells. Also I bequeath for the use of my Chaplain or Chaplains celebrants in the same (chapel) my new missal, which begins on the second folio Lutar^y tuum.⁴² Also I bequeath to the use aforesaid my silver-gilt cross, also my third gilt chalice, two silver Vials, and my plain white vestment of damask, and one plain crimson vestment⁴³ of velvet on Satin, and my third plain vestment of Alexandrian embroidery, to remain there for ever. And I will that, the requisite license being obtained, an honourable monument be built in the wall and the doorway be pulled down. Also I bequeath to each canon of the said cathedral Church taking part in my funeral and mass xxd, to each vicar xjd, to each clerk vjd, to each chorister njd. Also I bequeath to the aforesaid Cathedral church of Wells one pair of gilt basins, one pair of thuribles, and my small missal for the use of the high altar there. Also I bequeath to the glorious martyr, the blessed Thomas of Canterbury,⁴⁴ a pair of beads⁴⁵ of gold, enamelled and engraved. Also I bequeath to the Cathedral church of Salisbury my gilt image of saint Mary. Also I bequeath to the Cathedral church of Lincoln⁴⁶ for the repair of the same all the farm of my prebend there, excepting only Cs of the preceding year left below to the church of saint Margarete, Leicester. Also I bequeath to the Cathedral church of Exeter my best gilt chalice. Also I bequeath to the Collegiate church of Wimborne Minster Cs to buy a chalice for the use of the high altar there.⁴⁷ Also I bequeath to the parish church of Wollyngtone⁴⁸ a suit of vestments of white damask. Also I bequeath to the parish church of Charlton Mackerelle⁴⁹ my Registered, and legitimately pronounced for the same; and the administration of all the property concerning the said deceased and his testament wherever existing in the Province of Canterbury, was Committed to Mister Roger Keys and John Biconyth, brother of the said deceased, named executors in the same testament, to make a faithful Inventory of all and every property of this kind, and to be shown to the Lord before the feast of Easter next ensuing. And to Mister John Storthwayt¹⁰¹ was issued a commission to commit the administration of such property to Mister John Reynolde, co-executor named in the said testament, on the last day but one of the said month of November, and to certify within the feast of the Purification of the blessed Virgin Mary next ensuing; Also to Mister William Fulforde,¹⁰² conjointly and separately.

During the next twenty years a John "Byconyll" is frequently mentioned, and though it is not easy to prove absolutely the exact relationship he bore to the chancellor, yet as the latter in his will left his brother John two sums of money for the express purpose of acquiring land, and we find John Byconyll buying between five and six hundred acres, with other property, near Ashprington, in Devon, in 1451; the three hundred marks spent thereon may well have been a small portion of one of these legacies. The name occurs in 1452-3, and again in 1453-4 in connexion with that of Agnes, daughter of John Lyte,¹⁰³ and those of two of the Horsey family, which was (101). Storthwayt was Precentor of Wells Cathedral, 1426; Executor of of Bishop Bubwith, 1424; Chancellor of Wells, 1439. He founded a Chantry at the altar of the Holy Cross, Nov. 14th, 1451, and he directed (Sep. 16th, 1450) that £10 should be paid annually by Wraxall Church for its maintenance. Died 1454. Storthwayt is the name of a manor in Yorkshire.

intimately associated with the Byconylls till the 16th century. On July 7th, 1455, "Johannes Byknell" and Stephen Hatfeld were returned to parliament for Shaftesbury, and in 1456-7, "John Byconyll" served the office of Escheator for Devon and Cornwall, the first inquisition he held being on Elizabeth, wife of Sir John Seyntmaur, Kt., whose grandson afterwards married Elizabeth Chokke (Dame Biconyll).

I pass on now to speak more at length of a member of the family of wholly different type to the chancellor, a man of war instead of a man of peace, resembling him only in one point, in his intense devotion to the Church, but otherwise rather after the fashion of those Condottieri leaders who fought generally for the side where their interest lay. Sir John Biconyll, Kt., played a considerable part in the history of Somerset from 1470 to 1502, and, since he belonged to the Chapter of Wells, I may appropriately call him also a "forgotten canon."¹⁰⁴ With his tomb, oddly enough, certain archaeological questions are likewise connected, and just as the monument at Wells has increased our knowledge of the cathedral, so this other has contributed towards a correct understanding of the Abbey of Glastonbury. It seems to me indeed not too much to say, that in time, when the meagre known history of Henry VII's reign is amplified by complete search in the vast stores at the Record Office, we shall learn much more than I am able to tell at present about this prominent character. When parliament was summoned to meet on Oct. 6th, 1472, at Westminster, we find John Biconyll representing the united counties of Somerset and Dorset (which were not separated till 1566), and his seat remained undisturbed as long as that parliament lasted. A dissolution took place March 14th, 1474-5, but when the new house assembled three years later, on Jan. 16th, 1477-8, he was not elected. Whether he ever entered parliament again cannot be ascertained, because the returns are often missing or incomplete, in fact the names of all the members for these counties in the next eleven parliaments are lost. He was also sheriff for Dorset and Somerset in 1472, and again in 1473. The references to Sir John, however, occur in so many places that it would be tedious to enumerate them, and I shall therefore only mention a few. In 1474, he owned the three manors of North Perot, South Perot, and the adjoining Pepilpen, as well as the advowsons of the two first,¹⁰⁵ and in 1472, he was patron, with others, of Brympton, and in 1476, of Nunney¹⁰⁶ and Middle Chinnock in Somerset, and of Batcombe in Dorset: he also took active interest in the religious guild founded in 1482, at Croscombe, three miles from Wells, "in honour of God, the Blessed Virgin, and St. Anne"; various documents between that year and 1489 referring to him.¹⁰⁷ At this time he made up his mind to stake his fortune on the cause of Henry of Richmond, and this ended in his fighting so valiantly at the battle of Bosworth that the triumphant king knighted him on the field, August 22nd, 1485, together with his two friends William Courtney and the Baron of Carew:¹⁰⁸ Somerset consequently took no inglorious share in that hardly-contested victory. Perhaps gratitude now gave a fresh stimulus to the other side of Sir John's character, for directly he returned home, October 4th, he made a curious arrangement with the warden of the Franciscan Minorites at Dorchester, the chief points of which were as follows:—

- "1. The devout and venerable man John Byconill, Kt., to be admitted as one of the founders of the Convent on account of his having first established mills on the water running thereby.

(108). Metcalfe's "Book of Knights." In Stow's Chronicle he is called "Sir John Bikenyle," and in the Cotton MSS. "Brikenell."

2. The Conventual High Mass to be principally granted and appropriated to him.
3. The monks to bind themselves for ever to celebrate his decease on the day after the feast of their Holy Father St. Francis.
4. 'The same John, and such as shall by him be recommended,' to be prayed for by name every week in the Chapter House.
5. That these ordinances and decrees of the said John, concerning the mills, be punctually observed, namely :

First. That there be yearly laid up in a chest, secured under three locks, 40s. of the profits of the mills for repairing them: the chest to be in the custody of the guardian or in the porch, one key thereof to be safely kept by the guardian or his assign; another by the discreetest of the brothers; and the third by a special friend chosen by the convent.

Second. That the Brother who is Hebdomadarius, appointed for the week, duly frequenting the choir by day and night, and praying for the said John, shall at the end of the week receive 6d.: but if he be negligent in his office, he shall be deprived of the said money either in part or in the whole.

Third. That every priest praying from the beginning to the end of the obsequies and mass for the said John shall receive 4d., and laymen 2d.

Fourth. That all profits, after paying the aforesaid ordinations, shall be laid out towards bringing boys into the order, and their education in good manners and learning; and that the brothers so brought in and educated to the perpetual memory of the said John be called Biconyll's Friars, and that none of them be called by their surnames.

Item. The recommendation of the said John shall be made in this form: 'Pray especially for the happy state of the devout and venerable man John Byconill, Kt., and on account of the first erecting of the mills upon our water, the chief founder of this place, and for his soul, when he shall depart this life.'”

The above contract “was kept with great respect,” but it gave dire offence to those Franciscans who stood up for the strict observance of the primitive rule of St. Francis forbidding the order to hold property.¹⁰⁹

Sir Thomas Arundell, K.B.,¹¹⁰ Oct. 3rd, 1485, appointed Sir John one of his executors, and we find “John Chokke, of Staunton Drew, in the countie of Somerset, Squier,” naming his brother “Syr John Byconnel (or Biconell), Knyght,” to the same office, April 18th, 1488.¹¹¹ Between those two dates he had contracted a second marriage with the widow of John Seyntmaur, who died Oct. 5th, 1485, and whose brass, with effigies of himself and wife, is now before the altar of Beckington Church.¹¹² John Seyntmaur being descended from Reginald de Paveley, Lord of Westbury, in Wilts, temp. Henry I, A.D. 1100-1135, this lady married into two branches of the same family.¹¹³ No issue, however, proceeded from this second union.

After the accession of Henry VII, Sir John appears to have remained in Somerset and Dorset, a trusty servant of the

In his will, at Somerset House dated Oct. 5th, 1485, proved Nov. 19th, he directs that his body may be buried “in the chancel of Bekynton,” and he leaves a legacy to his “son yet unmarried.” Dame Biconyll's will and engraving of the brass, are given in the Som. Arch. Soc. Proceedings, vol. xxxix, pt. I, p. 19. Lord Stawel was descended from her elder daughter; Lord Poltimore and Lord Egmont are from the younger; and Lord Bath from her sister Dame Wroughton.

(113). Her father, Sir Richard Chokke, had married Jane, daughter of William Pavie, of Bristol. If, as is quite possible, the name Pavie may be a variety of Paveley, Dame Biconyll would then not only be connected with the Paveleys, through both her husbands, but be of Paveley blood herself.

crown till his death, and the occasional notices of him refer chiefly to his connexion with various manors, although it is clear that he still took part in politics, because he was commissioned Dec. 23rd, 1488, with others, to examine how many archers the nobles and knights of Somerset were bound to find for the king's army for the expedition to Brittany; and in Sep. 1497, when Henry marched to Taunton during the rebellion of Perkin Warbeck, "Sir John Bickenell" accompanied his majesty "with a large number of noblemen, knights, esquiers, and valiaunt personages, prepared and readie with all thinges necessary for the fiede and battaille."¹¹⁴

Sir John lived at South Perot Court or Manor House, just inside the border of Dorset, which stood in the ground still called in remembrance of it Court Orchard, adjoining the west side of the churchyard.¹¹⁵ In the 14th century the Maubanks owned the manor, and in 1412-3 Christian, widow of John Crewkerne, of Childhay, and wife of Richard Clopton, was a tenant here of Philip Maubank. Later it belonged to the Carent family, then to the Horseys of Clifton Maubank; in 1449 to John Crokehorn, who held lands of Henry Horsey "as of his manor of South Perrot," and afterwards to the Daubeneyes, a small portion, however, being occupied by the Draper family.¹¹⁶ The next owner was Sir John Biconyll, and through the operation of the bequests in his will at the close of the 16th century the manor was leased to, or it became the property of, William grandson of Robert Gibbes, whose father Robert Gibbes, of Hunningham, Warwick, had settled at Netherbury, in Dorset. Charles I, in his march from the west, on Monday, Sep. 30th, 1644, "lay the night at Mr. Gibbs his howse, the Manor of South Barrett (Perot) Com. Dorset"; but not long afterwards the building was razed and the materials were sold. A porter's lodge was standing in 1680 on the north side of the ruined mansion, with a great court before the north door; and a part of the lodge existed till about 1781, when it was taken down by its owner, Edward Bellamy, of Cheddington.¹¹⁷ Other less important houses owned by Sir John in this neighbourhood were Pepilpen¹¹⁸ (now a farm) and North Perot Manor, both in North Perot parish, Somerset, and comprised in the beautiful estate of W. H. Hoskyns, Esq., whose grandfather purchased them from the family of William Pitt, the statesman. The outline of the moat and substructures of buildings of North Perot manor are still recognisable in a field near the road. The farm called Grey Friars and the field Monkwood, close by, most likely indicate some connexion with the Franciscans of Dorchester, whom we know Sir John and his wife held in such great regard. The manor was held by Sir John at one time, for a rent of 2d., of Margaret, countess of Richmond, daughter of the duke of Somerset, and mother of Henry VII.¹¹⁹

One of the last acts of his life was to establish and endow, in the spring of 1501, two chantries; one in the Lady Chapel of bishop Stillington, adjoining the cloisters of Wells Cathedral, and the other in the cathedral itself.¹²⁰ His death occurred on the 23rd of August, 1502, and his will, written with his own hand,¹²¹ is dated August 15th, 1500, which super-

The before-written testament together with the last will of the same was Proved on the 19th day of the month of November, A.D. 1501.¹⁶⁶ By the oath of William Sayntmawre knight executor personally present and Mr. John Reed public notary procurator of the other executors And it was approved and registered And the administration was committed to the executors to administer well and faithfully and with unanimous consent And to exhibit a full and faithful Inventory Before the next future Natal feast of the Lord. Also to render a full and true account. Sworn on the sacred Gospels of god in due form of law.

It is not easy to guess why Sir John directed that his property should pass in the above manner at his wife's death ; because the Inquisition P.M. held at Exeter 22nd November, 1504, says : "John Brympton (Sydenham) is his kinsman and next heir, and of the age of 40 years and more." Wherefore then was he disinherited and nowhere mentioned in this testament ? I can only suppose that as the Sydenham family already possessed ample fortune he thought it unnecessary to distribute any part of his comparatively small estate where it was so little needed ; still it is certainly very unusual to find the children of a wife's first husband enriched by her second to the exclusion of his own direct descendants.

The will, though very instructive in many ways throughout, raises no other special question excepting the one connected with Sir John's tomb, to which I have already alluded,¹⁶⁷ and we should have had no trouble with that if the document had been drafted with legal care and not by the testator himself, who at the commencement says he will "hereafter declare" where he desires to be buried, but nevertheless omits to do so. Fortunately, we gather from his wife's will¹⁶⁸ that he was interred in "the sepulture of Glastonbery," and it is concerning the unnamed site of this "Chapelle of Glastonbÿ, late bielled by her husband and herself," that the difficulty arises.

There is in Leland's Itinerary a passage, discussed so much as to have become almost famous, which has created the needless doubts about the position and name of the Lady Chapel, and the legitimate ones concerning the situation of the tomb. These are that author's words, copied by me verbatim from the original manuscript in the Bodleian Library :

"In capella S. Marie a bor : part chori ĩ sacello

Joanes Biconel, miles et Elizabeth.

Gul : Semar, miles, ĩ eadē volta."¹⁶⁹

The best architectural history of the Glastonbury ruins with which I am acquainted has been written by Professor Willis,¹⁷⁰ nevertheless it requires both explanation and correction. It surprises me, for instance, to notice stated therein only as a probability instead of as an easily ascertained certainty, that "the name 'Joseph's Chapel' had been fixed upon the Lady Chapel even before the Reformation"; because the fact of Sir William Seyntmaur, his mother Dame Biconyll, and her husband Sir John, being all buried together in Leland's Lady Chapel, I should have thought would immediately have led an inquirer to refer to their wills, if he entertained misgivings on the subject, when it would have become plain at once that as Dame Biconyll desired to be buried in her husband's tomb, and as her son directed his body to be laid "in Joseh Ahammathia is chapell,"¹⁷¹ consequently if these three persons were found by Leland in one chantry, in St. Mary's, both names must have been applied indiscriminately to the same structure at the time of the burials, long before the change from the Catholic faith. Following upon this, however, the Professor pronounces an opinion on the position of the chantry tomb which is indeed astonishing. He says: "On the north side of the east part of St. Joseph's Chapel¹⁷² there are manifest indications which shew that an attached building had been added to it between the buttresses, which might well have been one of those parasitical chantries that occur so commonly in such positions"; and again: "Between the N.E. turret and the next buttress the wall is demolished, but a mass of rubble projects beyond the base line of the building, and above this are indications of some subsequent jutting appendages which may have been an oriel chamber or a stair tower." "Leland records a sepulchral chantry chapel in a position which would agree with this point. This chapel may be supposed to have been carried by an arch from buttress to buttress on the outside, so as not to obstruct the crypt window below." I cannot admit that chantries, "parasitical" or any other sort, are common in such a position, for I have never seen or heard of one which—like Muhammad's coffin, suspended between heaven and earth—was built on an arch resting on two buttresses to avoid blocking a window. Is it not also a wildly comprehensive guess and nothing more, to surmise that a very small shapeless fragment of rubble "may have been an Oriel chamber, or a stair tower," or a "parasitical chantry?" A solution of the puzzle where this chantry stood, depends chiefly on the sense implied in Leland's words, "a boreali parte chori." He may have intended to say that the shrine was built out from or against the wall on the inside of the first bay of the Galilee, where indeed it could well have been ; or that it was outside in the burial ground, and approached from the door in the second bay ; but then it must have been nearly impossible to avoid interfering with the crypt lights, and a covered approach could not entirely advantageously have been constructed. But Leland, who wrote very bad Latin, perhaps only meant after all that the chantry was in the northern part of the choir, calling St. Mary's chapel itself by that name, and thus designating, not the Galilee porch, but more correctly what was strictly also St. Joseph's chapel. From the words "in capella S Marie . . . in sacello," as well as from the direction of Sir William Seyntmaur, that he was to be buried in St. Joseph's chapel, no one would naturally look for the tomb outside the main wall. It is consequently conceivable, and if St. Joseph's had been a large edifice I should have said it was highly probable, that the shrine was erected at a very short distance from the internal face of the north wall, a little east of the existing doorway, opposite the third bay ; hence its total disappearance is accounted for by the falling of the floor carrying the whole structure with it into the crypt ; the coffins, either before or after this happened, having been rifled and stolen for the value of the lead, whilst the débris of the chantry in course of time would have been cleared away when the crypt was emptied of its ruin.

Dame Biconyll survived her husband rather less than two years, for she died June 30th, 1504, and her will is the complement to his.¹⁷³

I have mentioned that Sir John's testament was written with his own hand, and I have shown how his carelessness has caused confusion in certain names and localities at Glastonbury ; but the text being so executed has the partly compensating advantage of proving that the knight possessed a somewhat unusual accomplishment for that period, in being able to write as well as to fight. The circumstance, moreover, that he and his wife, between them, provided for ten scholars being sent to Oxford, likewise indicates that they were in advance of their day in the value they attached to education, and, in spite of their superstitious devotion to priests and their observances were far from regarding knowledge as useless and profane. One moral, the utter vanity of planning or endowing for ages to come, can scarcely fail deeply, almost painfully, to impress the reader of these wills, especially if perchance he sympathises at all with the earnest spirit of people who lived in such a differently thinking age, whose ways we can realize but imperfectly, and whose like we shall see no more. For do we not find here arrangements establishing chantries, obits, priests, and scholars, legacies to cathedrals, abbeys, churches, with ordinances solemnly enrolled, to last for all future time? And yet, within a few years, the decrees of the rapacious Henry and his "harsh and dogmatic" son,¹⁷⁴ swept everything away. Whatever we may believe concerning the necessity for extensive reform, few will deny it was often a cruel wrong, perpetrated by force, under false pretences, when these pious bequests were utterly annulled in the 16th century, and not merely all the money and artistic treasure, but the very shrines and sanctuaries, wantonly despoiled and ruined. One might almost imagine that these gifts, by what the poet calls their "unfortunate beauty,"¹⁷⁴ involved their donors in one common doom, because thenceforth the history of the wealthy and powerful Paveleys, their descendants, and many of their friends, recedes into a mediæval twilight, obscure to the genealogist.

During the long reign of Elizabeth, the very name of Paveley came near extinction, whilst the enamelled arms of Sir Reginald, in St. George's Chapel, are to-day the chief visible reminiscence of its old renown.
