Harriet Induni

I have recently completed a PhD in English at the University of Leeds, with a thesis looking at ruins and memory in Irish literature. Before this I went to Cambridge and Trinity College Dublin. My main interests include heritage and modern history, especially in relation to ruins and decay (both at real sites and in art). I am keen on all matters literary, including library and archive management. I also like computing and technology - I'd be interested to get involved in website maintenance if that would be useful and have begun to assist with running SANHS' Zoom seminars.
